What is macrolane?

Macrolane is made from hyaluronic acid, the same substance found naturally in your body to maintain its plump and soft feel.

Has the macrolane compound been used before?

It has been injected into fine lines and wrinkles on the face for 10 years as Restylane and Perlane, in fact 9 million doses have been injected in to the face with minimal side effects. Macrolane is made up of much larger particles to enable it to be injected into the breast.

How does macrolane feel?

Macrolane feels firm for a few days like firm breast tissue as it absorbs water, after a week or 2 it begins to soften and after a few weeks becomes quite soft and very similar to breast tissue.

Do macrolane breast augmentation injections hurt?

No, the doctor will numb the area with a local anaesthetic before injecting Macrolane.

How long does the treatment take?

The treatment takes between 30 and 45 minutes and involves the Macrolane product being injected into the desired area to instantly add both volume and lift.

How long do macrolane breast augmentation injections last?

Macrolane is topped up every year with roughly half the volume that is injected initially. Most people would have 200mls in the first treatment thus have a 100ml top up in 12 months.

Is macrolane breast augmentation injection safe?

Macrolane consists of hyaluronic acid which already exists within your body and thus is not recognised as a foreign substance. Extensive trials since 2002 have shown no long term issues.

Who is allowed to inject macrolane?

Only a handful of doctors have been trained in the UK, Dr Steventon at the Epsom Skin Clinic is one of the first UK Dr's to be fully trained in the technique.
